

Paddle sports continue to trend up significantly increasing belt pack style life jackets use.

Paddlers under 12 years of age must wear a USCG-approved Type I, II, III or appropriate Type V personal flotation device. Belt packs are categorized as Type V and are becoming a favored choice due to their comfort and ease of movement

Unlike traditional life jackets, inflatable belt packs are worn around the waist and deployed when needed, making them a practical option for those who prioritize both safety and mobility on the water. Whether paddling on a serene lake or navigating ocean waves, having the right safety equipment is essential for a fun and enjoyable experience.

Leland's Maximum Inflation Brand Rearming kits cover all inflatable belt pack brands.

Here is a snapshot of just the popular belt pack rearming kits to support the paddle sports boom.
